

While none of us have had an encounter like the one Paul had when Christ came into his life, we can all learn much from the way that God's calling in his life effected Paul's every day decisions. That's why Romans 15 is so important. It's more than an interesting account of Paul's travels. It provides a glimpse into the way that he formed his decisions.